Third Monday of July 1839, shors are appropriate, and attack our reason by the force of their beautiful emplicity. We remember once passing by an Irish cottage on the estate of an absentee landlord, whose agent had distrained for rent; the family were of the very poor. A mother, whose husband was only recovering from the 'siekness,' as typhus lever is always called, staggered from beneath the door-way, not from any weakness of her own, but from her efforts to support the wreck of what had been, three years before, the facst young man in the parish. She was followed by two little children, the small remnant of her family-three had sen carried to the grave by the disease rom which the father was recovering; t was beautiful to see how that pale, thin, deep-eyed woman suffocated her own feelings with the affection she bore her husband.

"Dontery after the poor place, chil-dren dear; sure th' Almighty is above as all-and this last throuble has been sent in good time, whin there's not so many of us to bear it. The could earth is heavy enough on Kathleen and Matty and Michael, but the throuble of this day would be heavier-for they were made up of feeling. Sure my darlings, if there's power given the landlord now, he'll not be our landlord in the world above! The Lord be praised for the same! Dont cry afther the pig, Ellen, avournoon, what signifies it? May the istle boy take the cat itself, sir?" adfressing the half tipsy man who had their miserable cabin. "Never beed it, county. my darlint, though to be sure it's only natural to like the dawshy cat that lay in his bosom all the time of his sickness. Keep up, Michael," she whispered to her husband, who, overpowered by illmess and mental suffering, resisted her efforts to drag him into the high road; he glared upon the bailiff with the glare of a famished tiger, so famished that it has not the power to spring upon is foe impotent in all but the fierce and meking thirst for blood, "What signihes it? sure we'll be happier than ever -by'n bye" she added, while the haggard smile upon her lips was the bitter sockery of hope. "Come away Michael, wonder that you wouldn't be above letting the like of him, without a heart, see that you care about them or their goings on. Oh! where's yer pride gone? that, and the silence together, put maay a throuble over us that's known only ourselves and the Almighty-blessed He is! He knows the troubles of the poor and keeps their secrets. Come away Michaell and don't let them tame Nagurs see that it's the woman that puts courage in ve.

But the peasant heeded her not-the home affections were tugging at his least. He kept his eyes fixed upon the emments of the furniture of his once amfortable cottage, that were dragged aprevious to being carried away: he inted to the potatoe kish which was placed upon the table-that indispensae article in with the potatoes are rown when boiled, and which frequentin the wilder and less civilized parts Ireland, is used as a cradle for the abby". "God bless you!" he exclaimto the man! "God bless you, and s not worth half a farthing to ye, it's son county. lling to pieces; but it is more to me, omeless and houseless as I am, than D. G. & R.
